DISSOLUTION OF GRAIN MARKETING CO.

COOPERATIVE CONCERN WAS ORGANIZED A YEAR AGO

Disintegration of the Grain Company, Marks the Failure of the Most Ambitious Cooperative Experiment in Agrarian History—It Was a $26,000,000 Concern.

A major step presaging dissolution of the grain marketing company, the $26,000,000 cooperative grain concern will be taken at the regular weekly meeting of the Chicago board of trade directors here this afternoon, the United Press learned.

The directors, according to Gray Silver, president of the grain corporation are expected to act favorably on a petition for membership on the open market filed by the Armour Grain company and the Rosenbaum Grain company integral parts of the grain marketing corporation.

According to Silver, the move does not necessarily mean dissolution. It merely is a step regarded as "business prudence," he said.

Leading financiers, however, regard it as the initial move in breaking up the huge combine brought about by consolidation of four large grain companies about a year ago.

Optional contracts, promulgated at the time of consolidation expire July 28. On this date, it is believed the company will finally announce dissolution, placing responsibility on the failure of farmers to support the corporation.

"We still regard the grain corporation as a workable business," said Silver, "the new move does not mean final dissolution.

"We intend to carry on after July 28, the date of expiration of optional agreements. However, if the farmers fail to support us as they have in the past, other steps will be taken, what they will be I cannot at this time say."

The Armour Grain company, the largest of the four old-line grain companies that merged to form the cooperative which was to have been controlled and owned by farmers, and Rosenbaum Brothers, another of the vendor companies, applied for the right to do business under their own names on the Chicago Board of Trade again. The permission was granted.

The Armour company will take over all the Grain Marketing company's open contracts, amounting to about 3,000,000 bushels of grain.

George E. Marcy, head of the Armour Grain company and an executive of the cooperative, when asked if the cooperative expected to dissolve following today's happenings, said:

"Well, it looks like it, doesn't it?"

Banker creditors yesterday announced that the properties merged to form the cooperative were to be turned back to the old-line companies which were parties to the merger, but officials of the Grain Marketing company emphatically denied that such was the plan and declared that the cooperative would be able to meet obligations amounting to $4,000,000 on July 28, the end of the first year of its operation.

Grain Marketing company officials were still firm in their statements today that the company did not intend to disintegrate and that plans would be formulated before July 28, by which it might be continued.

Armour Grain company and Rosenbaum Brothers company integral parts of the grain marketing corporation the $26,000,000 cooperative grain concern, became members of the Chicago Board of Trade clearing house this afternoon.

Notices have been sent to all customers of the grain marketing company having trades in futures to transfer their trades to the Armour Grain company, at the close of business July 8.

THE MAILMAN IS HUCKSTER EXPERIMENT

Rural Carrier is Go-between City Dwellers and Farmers
—Shares Postage Costs.

Rural Route B, operating 50 miles northeast of Richmond, Indiana, including considerable territory in western Ohio, is one of the 75 routes which the postal department selected to conduct an experiment in bringing the products of the farmer directly to the door of the consumer in the city.

On July 1, B. M. Gay, carrier on this route, accepted the products and then delivered them to the city address.

As extra compensation for the work, he receives one-half of the postage required to carry the parcel thru the mails. The products include fruits, vegetables, berries, poultry, eggs, milk and cream.

By this plan the postoffice department hopes to draw the producer and consumer closer together, as an agreement of the city dweller with the farmer to take certain amounts of articles will bring the commodity fresh from the farm on the day mailed, and delivered by the carrier in person, as the city carriers are not called on to do this extra work.

The plan is confined to rural routes from the city out of which the carrier operates, and shipments to other towns for delivery by rural carriers will not be accepted. The plan, according to postoffice officials at Richmond, is an experiment that Washington is carrying on to test its feasibility.

DECK HAND NOW MILLIONAIRE IN FEDERAL COURT

Tries to Defraud Government
Out of Nearly a Half Million Dollars Income Taxes.

New York, July 9, (UP).—Forty-three years ago Eugene Constantin, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, came to this country as a penniless French immigrant and swabbled decks on a Mississippi steamboat.

Today he is under arrest in New York charged with attempting to defraud the government of income taxes totalling nearly $500,000.

Oil and rapid development of the southwest during the past half century account for Constantin's romantic acquisition of wealth.

During the World war, the former deck hand is said to have expanded his fortune to $10,000,000.

Seized on the eve of his intended departure for Europe with his family, Constantin agreed, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney Mattuck to return to Tulsa and "face the music." After his release on $3,000 bail, however, Constantin said he probably would not go to Oklahoma.

After working as a deck hand and then as a laborer in the rice fields of Louisiana, Constantin became a banker in the south and started his fortune with sugar cane speculation. Then came oil and millions.

The government charges him with refusal to pay income taxes and penalties for 1920 and 1921, aggregating $482,656.69 and with omitting large sums of taxable income in his returns for these years.

PICTURESQUE AND WONDERFUL IS WINDING WAY

To Ash Cave—Part of Road
Narrow and Rough but Well
Worth Effort Put Forth.

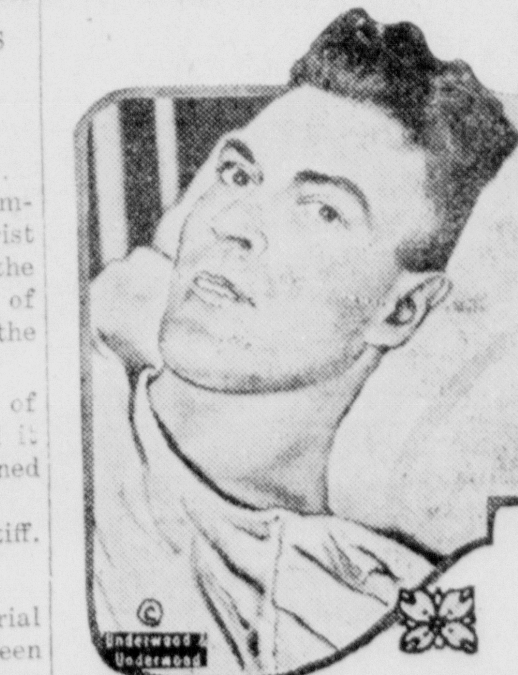

For the adventuresome motorist the trip to Ash Cave from Circleville abounds in beautiful scenery. There is five miles of poor road at the end of the trail but the raving where the cave is is well worth seeing.

Striking out from this city along the Adelphi pike the motorist go direct to Laurelville where the main square sign board points the way to Hayes, which is about six miles from Laurelville.

The road goes on thru Reeds to South Bloomingville about six miles beyond Haynes. From there to Ash Cave the road is narrow and rough but very beautiful. Rolling hills, heavily wooded at this time of year make the scenery beautiful. It is best to inquire along there if one is going right so as not to miss the entrance to the Ash Cave.

The cave is one of nature's beauty spots tucked away in the hills, waiting to please the exploring motorist. For the driver who wants something different this trip will well repay his efforts.

DEATH CALLS TWO MEMBERS IN ONE FAMILY

Wayne G. Lindsey and Grandson, Robert A. Lindsey, Die
Three and Half Hours Apart.

Wayne Griswold Lindsey and grandson, Robert Arthur Lindsey, died Wednesday night three and a half hours apart.

One had reached the ripe old age of 84 years and the other, afflicted from childhood was barely eleven years old.

Wayne G. Lindsey died at the home of his son-in-law, John Mogan, on North Scioto street at 11 o'clock. He had been an invalid for five years. His last serious illness was of nine week's duration. His death was due to heart disease.

Mr. Lindsey was born in this county Christmas day, December 25, 1841. He was the son of John J. and Mary Harman Lindsey, pioneer residents of this county, who came to this county from Virginia.

February 26, 1865, he married Miss Keziah Fry, a daughter of John Fry. The latter died several years ago.

Four sons and three daughters survive. They are George G. Lindsey, of Walnut township; Nevill W. Lindsey of Columbus; John E. Lindsey, of Madison township; Mrs. Ida Mogan, Lucy, wife of Dr. J. J. Rooney, of this city; Mrs. Nellie F. Davis, of Urbana and Lyman O. Lindsey, of Franklin county. Two sons, William and Wayne S. Lindsey, died some years ago.

Of his immediate family one brother and five sisters are living. They are W. V. B. Lindsey, of this city; Mrs. Martha Hitler, of Washington township; Mrs. Jane Shupe, of Fulton Kentucky; Mrs. Lucy Seall, Miss Minerva Lindsey and Mrs. J. E. Wagner of this city.

The deceased was a farmer by occupation, but later in company with his sons embarked in the fertilizer business which they conducted for a number of years successfully.

The funeral services will be held at the home of John Mogan, Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Rev. E. K. Johnson will officiate. Interment will be in Forest cemetery.

Robert Arthur Lindsey died at the home of his mother, 520 South Court street, Thursday morning at 2:30 o'clock. The deceased had been ill for the past two years of meningitis.

He was a son of the late Wayne S. Lindsey and Ella Stout Lindsey, and was born in this city October 5, 1914.

His mother and one sister, Miss Clara Lindsey survive.

The funeral services will be held at the Trinity Lutheran church Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. G. J. Troutman will officiate. Interment in Forest cemetery.

"An Austrian one day, after lunching at a Monte Carlo restaurant, started off to get his coffee at the Cafe de Paris when his waiter rushed down the street after him yelling:

"Thief, rascal, I'll have you pinched."

"What's the matter with you?" said the astonished Austrian.

"You miserable thief," roared the waiter, "that had two franc piece that I gave you in change you actually had the nerve to give me back as a tip."

THE A. B. C. of FOOD VALUES

Among the Elements Necessary to Health, the Mysterious Vitamin Plays a Leading Role

DID you ever see a baby with rickets? How did it effect you? Didn't you feel sorry for the poor little thing because something was lacking out of its wee life?

Something was lacking—a very vital thing to all life and health and growth—vitamins. And who was to blame? In almost every instance the mother, though probably she never knew it, and would very much have resented it had you told her so.

Again haven't you often felt sorry for the little anemic child who looked half starved, and was always tired? The mother probably told you there was no reason for such a condition because the child ate heartily. She couldn't understand it. But had she taken her child to a doctor doubtless he would have diagnosed the case as lack of vitamins.

Not so very long ago we thought our diet was complete if it contained proteins, carbohydrates, fats, water and organic salts in proper proportions. Then came the discovery that we must also have vitamins.

When vitamins were first discovered they were known by scientific names which nobody but the scientist understood, so, as a matter of convenience, they were designated by letters, A, B, C, D, and later X. All our knowledge of them is based upon experiments in feeding animals. Nobody has ever been able to isolate and analyze them. We know that certain foods are high in vitamins through their effects. Vitamins are found in milk and eggs, and vegetables and fruits, and to a lesser degree in meats. Cal's liver is especially high in vitamins. But unless properly cooked the value is greatly depreciated.

The same is true of vegetables. In fact it has recently been discovered that most canned vegetables are higher in vitamins than home cooked. The reason is obvious when one understands that it is through oxidation caused by the oxygen in the air that vitamins are destroyed, and not by excessive heat. The modern sanitary can used by all canners has no vent hole, and the foods are cooked in the can, thus excluding air and preventing oxidation.

Every housewife knows what would happen if she tried to cook in an air tight vessel. Expansion would cause an explosion. Canners, however, use an "exhausting" process by which the filled cans without tops are given a first heating that expands the food to brimful. While this food is still hot the tops to the cans are put on by machinery so that practically no air is left in the container. The food is then heated all the way from boiling point to 250 degrees Fahrenheit. When the cans are cooled the space that would have held air is a vacuum. This is what causes that sizzling sound when one starts to open a vacuum packed can.

Thus the canner saves the vitamins the housewife allows to escape through the oxidation in the air while cooking.

An instance of this is in tomatoes. Tomatoes are rich in vitamins, almost equal to butter fat in milk. Juice from a can of tomatoes, cooked as above, and which had been in storage a year, was fed to a pigeon suffering from polyneuritis with the result that the pigeon recovered. Another experiment tried on guinea pigs suffering from scurvy proved that canned spinach contained two and a half times the vitamin potency of the home cooked.

This should be valuable information to the mother. The baby suffering from rickets and the anemic child are similar instances to the pigeon and the guinea pigs. Vitamins were lacking. It is only within the past three or four years that the value of strained tomato juice for babies suffering from rickets has been discovered.

The role vitamins play in nutrition is very different from the roles played by other food elements. Vitamins supply the body with neither energy nor tissue building substances. But by some means, as yet unknown, they enable the body to utilize the energy-producing and tissue-building qualities of food which would be quite useless without them. They are like the spark plug in your car. The spark plug alone does not run the car. Neither does the gasoline. But what the gasoline and to produce a change whereby it becomes a source of energy. That is the relation of vitamins to the other food elements. It ignites them to energy producers and starts and keeps the human engine running.

It is not necessary to know any more about vitamins than that they are essential to the human system, and that they are found in milk and eggs, because of the food taken by the cow and the chicken, and in all green vegetables and fruits. As excessive heat does not work the destruction that oxidation does, they are higher in canned than in home cooked foods. They are quite as important to the adult as to the child, and a well balanced diet with milk and plenty of vegetables is sure to supply all the vitamins needed.

SALT FROM BIG LAKE

World's Greatest Deposits Are Located in Mountains of Washington State.

Wenatchee, Wash., July 7.—The world's greatest deposit of Epsom salts is being mined from an ancient lake bed in the mountains of the extreme north central part of this state. Under a 12 foot covering of mud, itself testing 55 per cent Epsom salts, is a layer of from 18 to 28 feet of the product which assays 95 per cent pure.

Development was recently started. Tunnels have been run through the solid crystal formation, dynamite being used to loosen it, after which it is shipped ten miles away to Oroville for refining.

Besides being a base for over 100 chemists, these salts have a wide commercial usage, ranging from face powder to brake linings.

INDOOR PICNIC

Twenty-five members of the Business and Professional Women's club enjoyed an indoor picnic at the residence of Mrs. H. B. Given on the Lancaster pike last evening. It being the regular meeting night of the club the business session followed the picnic. It was arranged as a farewell to the three representatives of the club who leave Friday of this week to attend the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs at Portland, Maine, on July 17th and 18th.

The representatives are, the president, Mrs. Ida Graham, Misses Mary Wilder and Charlotte McEwing.

New Ways To Serve Tuna Fish

WHAT do you know about tuna fish except that it comes in cans and makes an excellent salad?

Do you know that in flavor it is first cousin to the tender spring chicken, and is known as "the chicken of the sea," and can be added to chicken salad, so that even you would never recognize it if you had not mixed it with your own hands? Try this sometime when you are serving chicken salad and extra guests arrive.

The flavor of tuna fish by itself when used for a salad or creamed with evaporated milk and baked with bread crumbs is delicate and delicious. In serving it as a salad it should be placed on lettuce leaves with a little salad dressing, garnished with sliced lemon, a sprig of parsley and strips of green peppers, or with pimientos and green peppers or olives.

Overblouse Is Smart Enough for Formal Wear

The overblouse is one of the "indispensables" in the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman. It is smart enough for quite formal wear, yet its lines are so simple it may be worn on the most informal occasions. In this charming model Alice blue crepe de chine is used with all-over stitching in white. The long tie is a feature.

Many Fancy Styles in Season's Brassieres

The brassiere, which has been more in demand since corsets are less worn than ever before, is being made in a number of fancy styles. There are brassieres so light in material, so slenderly made, as to be just a band; a bit of lace drawn together in front with a few gathers or small tucks, with the usual shoulder straps, and often a pretty ribbon, single flower or cluster, a rosette or chou of chiffon. Among the newest styles are brassieres of colored silks trimmed with entre-deux of lace, white or black. These are unusual, gayly colored little garments in bright yellow, rose, blue and lavender.

Others are made of strips of ribbon in delicate shades overlapping to form a snug-fitting bodice; some with just one piece of wide ribbon in the pretty flowery brocades and prints, the edges drawn in and a cluster of gathers giving the required shape.

An extreme novelty is a brassiere which consists of a strip of white satin and one of black velvet winding about the figure, with-shoulder straps of velvet. Brassieres designed especially for the summer wardrobe are of batiste, the plain ones trimmed with lace or needlework. Many dainty embroidered muslins also are used in white or light colors of the Swiss eyelet embroideries. An intriguing trifle is the fancy shoulder strap. Since the straps that hold in place the underthings are worn frankly, much care is given to their quality and color. Pretty ribbons have been used heretofore, most of them in tub colors.

Now there is to be had a narrow strap of finely woven silk thickly studded with very small beads, with here and there a rhinestone. These are made in different colored beaded strips and, being adjustable, are shown in any sort of trimming to match the gown. Straps of embroidered muslin or made of lace are seen on some of the brassieres to be worn with thin summer frocks.

Printed Chiffons and Voiles for Parasols

Delightful, fantastic new things are being received from Paris—the "latest agony" in parasols. They are made of printed chiffons and voiles in enchanting flower patterns and striking conventional figures, and are drawn loosely over the silk foundation which forms a lining. Pale rose or any of the shades of pink are in demand, for they give a flattering glow to the complexion in the sun.

One of the most conspicuous parasols shown this season is of French cretonne in floral design, the flowers outlined with machine stitching of gilt thread.

Cretonne is the very newest material in these shades, with many delightful variants. All have short, clubby handles, shorter than ever before, the ferrule being just a stubby end, with occasionally a strip of twisted floss or ribbon through it, so the parasol may be slung over the wrist. The shape in all of these is an adaptation from the Chinese—almost flat, with many ribs, the most elaborate having sixteen. They are covered with muslin and tipped with jade or amber. All of the latest materials, the Ferroniere prints, crepes, voiles, the amber-colored chiffons, gay plain and flowered silks, even the India prints and ginghams, are seen among the novelties in parasols.

Difference Is Small

The difference between men's and women's styles in coats this season is infinitesimal. Both have broad shoulders, narrow hips, broad English revers, and the majority of each are double-breasted.

Idea of Humor Changes With Advancing Years

Nothing is more apparent than that a man's sense of humor "grows up" with him. Two Lebanon men stood watching a group of small boys, probably five or six years old. They were immensely tickled over the sad plight of an elderly man who had slipped on a mud-smeared banana peel and sat down on the walk with rather an undignified thud. He quickly regained his feet, but it was "hot stuff" for the small boys who chorused their excited glee.

"Nothing funny in an old man falling on the sidewalk," granted one of the men in disgust over the shouts of the boys.

"No, not now for us, but I can remember when I was a kid nothing was funnier than some grown-up person getting a sprawling fall," the other replied. "I guess our sense of humor grows up with us," he continued.

And undoubtedly it does. At ten years a boy will find keen delight in mimicking the soft speech of his big sister's beau. When he is fifteen he looks down with superior indulgence on his parents and he is positively amused at the seriousness with which they regard bread, butter, rent and other prosaic things of life.

A few years later at college he roars with laughter when prexy and the profs are sneezed off the platform by red pepper placed in the faculty hymn books. As a lover he repeats over and over to himself the cute little things which his sweetheart has said to him. At thirty, when he is married and a father of two or three lusty children, he gets his best chuckle by listening to some bachelor friend discuss life.

because the big joke is that the bachelor doesn't know anything at all about life.

At fifty he is secretly amused at the self-confidence of the bustling family man of thirty. By the time he has reached sixty he smiles in amusement, tinged with sympathy, upon the strenuous ambitions of his younger friends to achieve success, which they must abandon in a few short years. His seventieth birthday comes and he finds himself getting his great joy out of the play and pranks of his grandchildren. And he probably would laugh as heartily if not so loud if some old man should fall on a mud-smeared banana peel.—Lebanon (Ind.) Reporter.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Today I ate my dinner at Bingle's dining hall; the coffee was a winner, likewise the codfish ball. I ate a brace of chickens, a codfish and an eel, and muttered, "Oh, the dickens, how satisfied I feel!" And when I went to settle, the boss was standing there, with coffee in a kettle and salad in his hair. I said, "Oh, Mr. Bingle, your hash house can't be beat! Your victuals make me tingle with joy from head to feet! I like your scrambled taters, I like your beans, gadzook; you have the finest waiters, you have the ablest cook." And Bingle was so tickled the poor man almost cried, and from his eyes there trickled the tears of joy and pride. Then to the desk came Dutton a man with frozen face; he said, "My slice of mutton was simply a disgrace; the viands you are selling are not as advertised; your kraut is evil-smelling, your pies are vulcanized." Then Bingle said, severely, "I do not want your trade; you are accustomed, clearly, to grub that is decayed." Now when again he sees me in Bingle's bean bazaar, the boss will strive to please me in all the ways there are. He'll give me meat that's tender, and cake that's like a kiss and doughnuts that engender the ultimate of bliss. And so the path is easy down which I gayly tread; the compliments be wheezy, I see that they are said.—Walt Mason.

Author at Last TakesRank Above Bullfighter

Senor Blasco Ibanez, the author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "Blood and Sand," has been a good deal in the public eye of late, owing to some outspoken comments on affairs in his native country and his spectacular challenge to King Alfonso.

This gifted novelist is, by the way, one of the few writers of today who can practically name his own price for a story. Rather a novelty this, for Spain, where only a very lucky writer indeed can earn as much as a famous bullfighter, observes London Answers.

In this connection a good story is told of Ibanez. Returning from a successful lecturing tour in the Argentine, he met one of the idols of the bull ring. This hero told the author that he received 10,000 pesetas for each appearance he made.

"And I received 14,500 pesetas for one lecture at Buenos Aires," said Ibanez. "Now at last a Spanish writer receives more in an afternoon than a bullfighter."

Tuberculosis a Good StimulusGood Results Induce People of Michigan Community to Expand Work.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The farmers of Hillsdale county, Mich., demonstrated their practical foresight when in 1921 they decided to rid the entire county of bovine tuberculosis. It was the first county in the country to be put on this free list, the work being done in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture. Instead of sinking into their feather bed of laurels, the people of this community have gone ahead with other improvements, stimulated by the good results of their big venture in disease eradication, which has increased their returns from dairy products and breeding stock.

Once the county had been freed of tuberculosis in its cattle herds, the economic benefits were so satisfactory that the farmers were stimulated to search for other ways of increasing the returns from their live stock. Next to the securing of healthy stock, the improvement in the quality of the animals appealed to them as being a logical step toward the realization of a better live-stock industry. As a result there has been a noticeable increase in the quality of dairy stock through the use of better blood and the elimination of poor producers through keeping production records.

Improve Poultry Flocks.

The most recent move which may be said to have had its origin in the campaign against bovine tuberculosis is a determined effort to improve the poultry flocks by the eradication of the same disease from feathered live stock and by culling out the poor producers.

The work of poultry improvement through these means was started the past summer in one township by a representative of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, and a poultry expert from the college of agriculture, the county paying all their expenses except salaries. The culling of the first 40 flocks revealed that the average farmer, in spite of the popular impression to the contrary, was losing money on his chickens. It was found that of these flocks a little more than 40 per cent had tuberculosis. This condition is looked upon as a plausible explanation of the fact that 22 per cent of the hogs shipped from the county are found to have the disease, as hogs are particularly susceptible to the avian type of the disease.

Help Poor Results.

At the same time that the prevalence of tuberculosis was disclosed among the poultry flocks, other conditions were revealed which help to account for the poor results obtained. Among them are poor stock or culls, improper feeding, having pullets hatched too late in the spring, and keeping old birds. The conclusion has been reached as a result of this study of conditions that it is advisable to keep the poultry flock fenced in away from contact with other live stock on the farm.

It Pays to Haul Manure From Stable to Field

It costs a farmer 53 cents on every ton of manure he lets accumulate in the barnyard, a 21-year test at the Ohio agricultural experiment station at Wooster shows.

That's why it pays to haul manure directly from the stable to the field, says Earl Jones, soils extension specialist at the Ohio state university.

"Crop yields tell the story of the results of manure storage more clearly than a chemical test," Mr. Jones points out. "In an experiment at the Ohio station manure has, for 21 years, been applied to the clover sod in a three-year rotation of corn, wheat and clover. "On one series of plots, the manure has been hauled directly from the stall to the field early in the winter. For another series of plots an equal weight of manure has been left in a pile in the barnyard for three months before it was spread on the field.

"Stable manure produced 23 bushels of corn an acre, 10.5 bushels of wheat and 1,363 pounds of hay; manure from the barnyard produced an average of 19.5 bushels of corn, 9 bushels of wheat and 840 pounds of hay. Measured by the average value of crop increase, one ton of yard manure is worth $2.92, and one ton of stall manure $3.45."

Before Freshening Cow Should Be Given Rest

During the last six or eight weeks of the lactation period, that is, before freshening, the dairy cow must be given a rest so that she may store up some extra flesh on her body. It is a mistake to think that a dry cow can be neglected so far as feed and care are concerned. Neglect at this time will show itself in a poorer calf and in reduced production during the next lactation period. In regard to the time of calving an effort should be made to have the cows freshen at different periods of the year so as to secure a reasonably even production of milk throughout the entire year. If all dairymen would follow that plan no objection could be raised against it, for the public consumes about as much butter and cheese one time of the year as another, but so long as the great majority of farmers have their cows freshen in the spring, those who are anxious to make the most money possible should reverse that process and, at least, have most of them freshen in the fall.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATETaken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus, O., July 8, (UP).—The Ku Klux Klan will take over Buckeye Lake for a period between August 25 and 30, Clyde Osborne, grand dragon of the Ohio realm, announced today.

Osborne said national officers of the Klan would meet at the lake August 25 to 28 and that on the 29 would start the two day konkclave which may attract thousands of delegates.

Columbus, July 8.—Expert testimony designed to show that the company's high valuations justify higher rates was introduced at the resumption of the Logan Gas company's rate case before the Ohio Public Utilities commission today.

Sandusky, O.,—One calico dress costing $4.50 is all that George McCoy has bought for his wife in the 44 years they have lived together. Mrs. McCoy declared in the trial of the divorce case in which she is plaintiff. She said the only thing George had to complain of was that she snored.

Toledo, O.,—Bill Hunt, star football and basketball player of Ohio State university, has married Miss May Noyes of Toledo, it was learned today. Hunt will return to school this autumn, however.

New York, July 9, (UP).—Cooling rains broke the heat spell here last night after four persons were dead and eight overcome from the sweltering blasts of heat.

Health and HomeCARE OF CONVALESCENT IN SUMMER

For those who are just recovering from a serious illness the problem of food is a serious one. The patient, though well on the road to recovery, is usually weakened by the rigors of disease and the excessive heat is wont to sap his energy. Hence, the foods that are consumed during this period should be considered carefully as to digestibility, food value, ease of assimilation, purity and sterility. These are important in any food but especially so when the consumer is not strong and healthy.

In most cases, the one who is convalescing consumes milk in large quantities. This food contains all of the elements that are essential to the body. If milk is pure and germless, it is easily digested and assimilated.

Where the milk supply is uncertain or the quality not of the best, evaporated milk should be employed. It is sterile; it is just pure milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed. Its double richness may be modified, if desired, by the addition of water or it may be used just as it is, where rich, creamy dishes are desired.

Many people make the mistake of confusing evaporated milk with condensed milk. They are not at all similar in appearance, composition or taste. They cannot be used for the same purposes; condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk; evaporated milk has no added sugar, being pure milk of double-rich quality and food value.

Following are recipes of easily prepared dishes and foods that are well suited for the invalid and the convalescent.

Loganberry Cream.½ cup evaporated milk ½ cup loganberry juice
¼ cup water 2 tbsp. lemon juice
Pinch salt Pinch salt

Put all ingredients in a Mason fruit jar and shake thoroughly. Chill and serve in glasses filled ¾ full of ice chips. Raspberry, blackberry, and cherry juice may be used instead of the loganberry.

Iced Cocoa.3 tsp. cocoa milk diluted
3 tsp. sugar with
¼ cup water ½ cup water
Pinch salt ½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup evaporated

Mix cocoa and sugar thoroughly and add the ¼ cup water and boil over a low flame for 15 minutes. Scald the diluted milk and add cocoa syrup and salt. Continue cooking for 15 minutes in double boiler. Add vanilla. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

Wanted a Witness

Dora's aunt gloomed at her severely over the breakfast table. "As I glanced into the drawing-room last evening, I saw you with a young man's arm around your waist."

"Yes, auntie," said Dora, brightly, "I was waiting for you to pass the door and see us. You see, young men are so very slippery nowadays, one can't have too many witnesses!"

BROMINE AT LAST GETS ITS REVENGEOnce Defamed Chemical Comes Into Its Own.

Washington.—The Ethyl has gone down to sea for automobiles. The Ethyl is a specially constructed ship for robbing sea water of bromine.

"Bromine, in the last few years, has been getting revenge for defamation of character," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington.

"In 1906 a popular author divided all people into two kinds, bromides and sulphites. The sulphites, transferring chemical character to men, were the effervescent, eager, bright, original sort; the 'bromidiati.' The bromides were the conservatives, the mild bores, people who were always saying the same things in the same old way.

"Most people are formally introduced to bromine, the element which forms a part of all bromides, in their high school days, and they remember it as a distinctly unpleasant smelling, dark brown, heavy liquid that gives off an ugly brown gas readily.

"How little does the world know its chemicals! In less than ten years bromine stepped out of the role assigned it. 'Mild, conservative, meek,' bromine was one of the first poisonous gases used in the World war. Bromine made civilization gasp in horror. And by a still more recent feat of chemical acrobatics bromine has taken to serving automobile engines. The Ethyl has gone for bromine to help in the making of an 'antiknock' add. While it does not enter into the compound used, it has a finger in the funnel for those explosions which make it possible to describe an automobile engine as 'a Gatling gun firing 9,000 shots per minute.'

High Seas a Producing Area.

"The entrance of the 'high seas' in the bromine market divides the production between three major sources. The United States and Germany have been the chief producers. The Ethyl, which has been transformed into a floating chemical laboratory, is prepared to treat 7,000 gallons of water per minute. So small is the bromine content that this large amount of water will only yield between four and five pounds of bromine. Chlorine is employed to treat the water and the extraction process is fairly simple. The chlorine can be used over and over again.

"The Ethyl is sent to sea because of the impurities that might occur in shore waters. A further reason suggested is that water taken from the ocean at a great depth contains chemicals more highly concentrated and therefore with more bromine.

"Bromine is now obtained chiefly from Michigan, and from Strassfurt, Germany. Michigan and Strassfurt happen to be the sites of large salt deposits and with the salt are other chemicals, such as iodine, bromine and potassium.

"In these deposits world history is salted down and preserved for our knowledge. It is possible to reconstruct prehistoric geography from an exploration of the extent of the beds and the strata recorded in rock salt. At some distant time a great area of the Prussian plain was a bay of the ocean. It was a bay like some of those found today on the east shore of the Caspian sea where a shallow depression is practically cut off by a sand bar. Drawing the necessary water from the Caspian sea these bays crystallize tons upon tons of salt annually, gradually filling themselves up. When salt crystallizes a mother liquor of other minerals, highly concentrated, remains. If the feeder channel is deep this is drawn off as lighter water flows in. But if the stopper is firm in nature's huge crystallization vat, the mother liquors themselves crystallize out and leave iodine, bromine, potassium and other substances.

"In places the salt deposits in the Strassfurt region are nearly 4,000 feet thick. It is estimated that at least 8,000 years were required for such a deposit. A basin of normal sea water would have to be 30 miles deep to form such a deposit, so it is certain that north Germany was once the site of a Caspian sea or a Dead sea.

"In Medicine and Photography. "Bromine is extracted from the mother liquor after the salt is taken out of the brine from the deposit. The process is simple chemically, but the percentage of bromine is so small that the price has long been high.

"In medicine and in photography bromine fulfills the part given it by the humorist. Certain bromides are considered excellent sedatives. In the dark room bromides hold back the silver salts in the emulsions on paper and films which are as sensitive to light as the eye of a bat. Bromine is also important to the dye industry.

"But it is hard to deny the irony of bromides in their newest roles of speeding enemies to destruction and speeding up automobile engines."

A Snake in Erin!

Dublin.—Notwithstanding the legend that St. Patrick banished all the snakes from Ireland, one has been discovered in Dublin and is now on exhibition in the national museum. It is a very small specimen, less than two feet long and of the harmless variety. News of the find caused much comment in the press.

Snakes occasionally have been brought into Ireland from overseas, but they have never been known to breed here.

AMUSEMENTS

"New Lives for Old," a Paramount picture starring Betty Compson and coming to the Met theater tonight to remain for two days is a story of a gay French dancer who is enlisted in the secret service and goes on to show how Betty intercepts an enemy message and so saves the life of the man she loves, an American officer up in the first line trenches.

Wallace MacDonald, featured with Theodore Kosloff and Sheldon Lewis in the production, plays the officer. Kosloff is a German spy who poses as a French soldier and Lewis works with him.

Betty poses as an old washerwoman in the picture in order to obtain valuable papers from the spy. It is said audiences will never even suspect it is she until finally unmasked by Kosloff.

Some of the high spots in the picture which was adapted for the screen by Adalaide Heilbron, include the airplane fight between a French and German plane in which Kosloff is supposedly sent to his death, only to reappear long afterward in America where he almost ruins the happiness of Betty who has married the American officer. Kosloff, posing now as a French nobleman, has gotten himself engaged to Betty's sister-in-law. Betty and he recognize each other immediately and needless to say, there is the deuce to pay.

Jack Joyce, Margaret Seddon, Joseph Dowling, Helen Dunbar, Gale Henry, Marvel Quivey and Ed. Fause complete the cast playing in support of Miss Compson in this production, directed for the screen by Clarence Badger.

ISLAND PARADISE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Spain's Beauty Spot Not Well Known to Tourists.

Washington.—Europe's most recent tornado, coming hard on the heels of that in the Mississippi valley, struck the Spanish island of Majorca, a hundred miles south of Barcelona in the Mediterranean, demolishing several villages.

"Majorca is an island paradise not very well known even to Spaniards, and almost wholly missed by the stream of outside tourists that courses through other parts of the Mediterranean, Italy, and to a less extent through the Spanish mainland," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "But the beauties and delights of the island are beloved of its own people who have an intense local patriotism."

Gleaming, Marble Peaks.

"The island is almost square, about forty miles along each side, and lies as though hanging by a cord from the eastern end of the Pyrenees by one corner. Thus a corner points in each of the cardinal directions, while the sides are exposed to the northeast, the northwest, the southwest and the southeast."

"Along the northwest side which faces Spain is a high mountain range whose loftiest peaks, nearly a mile high, bear patches of snow in winter. But even in the summer their tops are gleaming white, for they are of marble and the crests of many are devoid of vegetation. The lesser peaks and shoulders are clad in a mantle of dark green pines, while lower are groves of ilex and flowering shrubs. On the gentler slopes of this northern coast and in its valleys, man has placed vineyards and orange and olive groves. The whole panorama, sweeping from the blue sea through varying greens to the shining-white peaks, makes a picture of incomparable loveliness."

Lowlands a Vast Orchard.

"It is south of the mountains that Majorca's garden spot is found, and the fertile plain that sweeps off from the foot of the range to the hills that rim the southeastern side of the island is called just that, the 'Huerta.' This level region supports many thousands of acres of almond and apricot trees, and in the spring is a vast sea of blossoms."

"Palma, the capital of Majorca, lies in a broad bay that indents the southwestern side of the island just south of the high mountains. A city has existed there probably since the days of Carthage, when colonists from that African empire occupied Majorca; but there is little evidence now of anything but Spanish influence. Scattered about the city are numerous interesting old palaces of the leading island families—one at least for almost every street. The population is about equal to that of Mobile, Ala., or Portland."

"Majorca, like the Spanish mainland, was overrun by the Moors. For 500 years they held the island with Palma (then Mallorca) a flourishing Moorish city. It was a thorn in the side of the Spanish Christian kingdom, however, for the Majorcan Moors became piratical in the Twelfth century, and no Christian ship was safe. King Jayme I of Aragon organized a strong expedition which sailed from near Barcelona in 1229, and after a siege, captured Palma. Soon the whole island was subdued and divided among Jayme's knights and soldiers."

"The Spanish Majorcans followed in the footsteps of their Moorish predecessors in so far as developing nautical ability was concerned. As traders, they rivaled the Genoese for a time, and once dominated the western Mediterranean, controlling Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Malta and the Balearics. Palma had a great dockyard for galleys. In the middle of the Fourteenth century more than 30,000 sailors and 400 vessels were in the Majorcan service. The Majorcan navy constituted one of Christendom's chief bulwarks against the ravages of the Barbary pirates."

"Europe's Leading Geographers. During their prime as merchant shippers, the Majorcans were famous as the leading geographers of Europe. They invented crude but effective instruments of navigation, and drew the most reliable charts then known. One of the most valuable old maps in existence is in a museum in Palma. Drawn by a Majorcan in 1439, it was once owned by Amerigo Vesputi. It is a remarkably accurate depiction of the Mediterranean; the Atlantic coast of Europe and Great Britain as far north as Jutland; and the Near-East, including the Persian Gulf and the Red sea."

"One of the interesting sights of Palma is the old exchange building, near the harbor, where great mercantile affairs were conducted in the old days, as they were in the exchanges of Venice and Genoa. The usage of the galley and the sailing vessel as the chief burden bearers of the world's sea-borne commerce, and the shifting of the world trade center from the Mediterranean, put an end to Majorca's importance as a trading station, and it now finds itself in a sort of eddy of world affairs, thrown on its own resources."

"Near the middle of the southeastern coast line of Majorca are great stalactite caves, among the largest in Europe. They are not, however, so extensive as those of Kentucky and Virginia or the huge Carlsbad caverns of New Mexico."

CAP AND BELLS

HER REASONING

A man wanted to learn boxing, but his wife wanted him to take up fencing instead.

"But, my dear," he argued, "if I were attacked I shouldn't have my fells with me."

"Well," she answered, triumphant, "you might not have your boxing gloves with you either."—Tit-Bits

Time

As the train entered the long tunnel a drummer breezed into the smoking compartment.

"Lots of kissing going on back there," remarked the drummer cheerily.

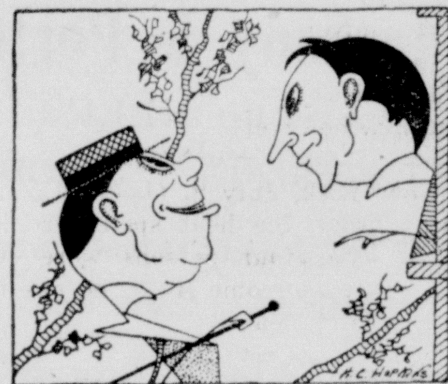

Whereupon several husbands made hasty exits.

The Greater Love

"What if I have loved another, dear? Don't you know it has only prepared me for the greater, higher love I have for you?"

"That's all right; but how do I know that the love you now have for me isn't preparing you for a greater, higher love for someone else?"

BEHIND AND AFTER HIM

"Tom says he has a number of citizens behind him in his business operations."

"Yes—trying to catch up with him I hear."

Must Wash Dishes

The blushing bride soon finds that being Mrs. Means ma is not around To do the dishes.

That Much

Two schoolmates met after many years.

"Yes, Myrtle," admitted one, "I married a poor man. Right now I have only one hat."

"At any rate you don't have to worry about what to wear."

Ho, Hum!

"Gosh! I heard a tiresome talk last night," remarked the first radio nut. "Why didn't you tune out and try for some other station?" asked the second ditto.

"No chance. Station WIFE was doing the broadcasting."

IN MEMORIAM

WESLEY M. RANK.

Wesley Martin Rank, a former resident of Ross county, died at his home in Holdrege, Neb., Saturday, May 30, 1925.

The news of his death here will be learned with regret by a wide circle of old friends and acquaintances. He has a number of relatives in this county who are heirs of his estate. The following obituary is from the Holdrege, Neb. Journal:

W. M. Rank, a resident of Holdrege since 1886, died Saturday morning after an illness extending over the past several months. In spite of an infirmity, Mr. Rank was able to be about during the past few years, but age assisted by a partial paralysis incapacitated him from active business.

W. M. Rank was born in Pickaway county, Ohio, on February 25, 1842, his father, Martin Rank being head miller in the Boggs-Kellenberger Mill on Scioto Creek. In the spring of 1848 his father removed to the Crouse mill on the Kinnickinnick Creek in Green township, Ross county, Ohio.

On September 16, 1869, he was married to Miss Ella R. Gossin of Tarlton. The young people lived for two years at the home of his parents and then moved to Lafayette, Indiana.

JAMES V. WRIGHT.

James V. Wright, aged 68, who had been connected with The Springfield Morning Sun for some time, died Tuesday morning at his home, 1119 North Fountain avenue, in Springfield, from acute dilation of the heart. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sadie McCarty Wright; one son, J. Warren Wright, and one sister, Mrs. Benton Himes, of Ashville. The body will be taken to Columbus, where services will be held in the chapel of Denton & Donaldson, 318 East Town street, at 2:30 p. m., Thursday. Burial will be in Canal Winchester.

MRS. ELENORA DRAKE.

Mrs. Elenora Drake, widow of Christopher Drake, a Civil War veteran, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Fosnaugh, in Stoutsville, July 8, 1925, at 4 a. m., after a lingering illness.

Deceased was born in Fairfield County, July 8, 1835, the daughter of Jacob and Martha (Walker) Greeno. She had been a resident of this county all her life. She leaves to mourn their loss the following children: Mrs. Joseph Fosnaugh and Mrs. Moses Fosnaugh, of Columbus; Mrs. Hugh Fosnaugh, of Stoutsville; Mrs. Arthur Tanner, of Marion; Louis Drake, of Ashville; C. E. Drake, of Stoutsville, and Noah Winsted, of Findlay, Ohio. She is also survived by one brother, Noah Greeno and 30 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held from the residence of Mrs. Hugh Fosnaugh in Stoutsville, on Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, Eastern time, with burial in Maple Hill cemetery by Eugene M. Crites, funeral director.

Bologna War Victim

The small province of Bologna, Italy, is feeling the effect of the war in the curtailment of its principal industry—the famous Bologna sausage. The popular viand had spread throughout the world and is exported in large quantities, but now the high import tariffs and the depreciated currencies have ended this prosperity and the market is confined to Italy, where a sandwich will invariably be found to contain a slice of Bologna sausage.

The music you will remember The Wurlitzer trio at Dewey park next Sunday afternoon. 9Julyd33.

CHURCH PICNIC.

The Ladies' Bible class of the Methodist church will picnic at the home of Mrs. Stanley Glick Friday, July 10, rain or shine. Members please meet at the church at 2:30 p. m. Automobiles will provide ways for all to go.

Canada's Beef Exports

Exports of beef from Canada during the month of November amounted to 2,408,400 pounds, valued at $194,445, according to a report issued by the federal Department of Agriculture. During the same month 13,026,600 pounds of bacon and ham, valued at $2,507,123, were exported.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milk cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

RICHES DRIVE MODEST MAN INTO SECLUSION

Oil Twice Causes Aged Confederate Veteran to Move Away in Search of Peace.

El Dorado, Ark.—Oil, the liquid gold of fiction, is a fugitive among minerals and more often than not eludes man, but not "Uncle Nap" Brown. "Uncle Nap" is the fugitive. Twice oil has overwhelmed him with added riches and now he has what he hopes is a haven, a farm in Texas, where oil has not been struck, yet.

Napoleon Bonaparte Brown, eighty years old, a veteran of the Confederacy, worth $500,000, and owner of nine automobiles, has been trying desperately to escape the "flowing gold" by moving from farm to farm.

First "Uncle Nap," as he is affectionately known, moved from the old homestead in the South oil field. Twenty wells, with as many shrieking and pumping engines, drove him to seek peace and quiet on another farm four miles east of this city. Then hardly had a crop been planted when the fields, intended to bloom with corn and cotton, became the scene of another rush. Soon 17 wells and 17 pumping engines set up their roar and rush.

Then he chose Gaines county, Texas, near the Seminole reservation, as a haven. Here with 800 acres of land on which oil has not been struck, as yet, he gets away from "civilization," as he whimsically calls that which striking oil brings to people.

Making Cookies

By CLARA DELAFIELD

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"GOOD afternoon, Mrs. Johnson. I just dropped in to say how d'ye do, us being next-door neighbors so to speak, me living over the way, and you being a newcomer to our town. And what might you be doing? Making cookies? Um-um. They smell good. No thank you, Mrs. Johnson, I never eat between meals.

"Beautiful children those are of yours. Two boys and a girl? Oh, three boys and two girls. It's nice when the family is split up so even as that, isn't it, though I must say five children is rather a lot in these days. I never had any. My grandmother—she was a Miss Tibbets of Boston—she had twelve. Yes, families were larger then.

"Do you know, my dear, I've called in to give you a bit of advice. I've noticed how you slave for those two boys and girls of yours—Oh, yes, three boys and two girls. It's so hard to remember details like that, isn't it, though you being the mother, of course you wouldn't have any trouble. I remember when my Cousin Lilla had twins. Nobody could tell 'em apart, and I said, 'For goodness' sake, Lilla, what are you going to do when they get mixed up? Their names were Jean and Joan. Queer names to give twins, don't you think, Mrs. Johnson? My husband said it was like a team of horses. He is so funny sometimes, when he isn't in a bad humor. Well—what was I saying? Yes—I said, 'Why don't you decide which is which and tie a red thread on one's arm and a green one on the other? But Lilla knew them quite well, without the slightest trouble.

"Well, I was saying—Oh, yes, I've noticed how you make a slave of yourself for those children. How? Well, take your making cookies, for example. A fine warm autumn day like this, when you should be out enjoying yourself, and here you are at home, making cookies for your children.

"Home from school hungry? Of course they'll come home hungry. But if I had my way I'd give them a nice piece of bread and jam, or maybe sirup. Children like that just as well, and they don't grow up with any pampered notions.

"And how long do you say that great pile of cookies will last them? Depends upon how hungry they are? Funny, now, I didn't look on it in that way. I should say, though, that they'll be mighty hungry children if they can get through that lot in a week. Yes, I can see they do look light, but still, cookies are cookies, and little stomachs won't stretch forever.

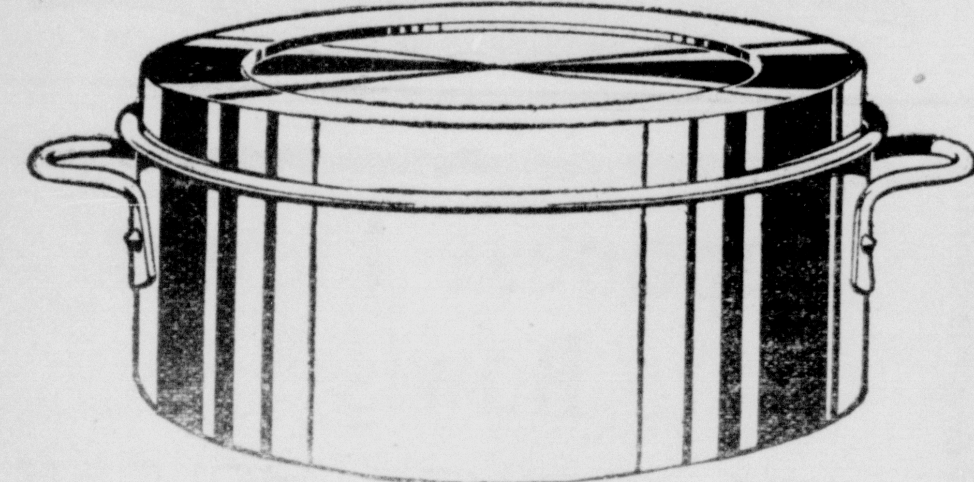

"Well, that sounds like your children on the porch, Mrs. Johnson, and so I shall have to go. Yes, I am very fond of children, only my head's not very strong, and they're apt to be upsetting. I'm sure I hope they'll like your cookies.

"But I do want to impress on you before I go, Mrs. Johnson, that it doesn't pay to make yourself a slave to your children. Let them grow up with independent ideas, not learn always to turn to and rely upon their mother. The idea of your sitting here on a fine summer's day like this making cookies. And I suppose next week it will be the same story over again.

"I do hope you won't mind my being frank about it—how do do, my dear! Just home from school?—my being frank, but quite a number of the neighbors have noticed the way you work from morning till night and pitted you for it, and so I thought I'd take it upon myself to speak to you. Oh, Mrs. Johnson, I wonder if you have such a thing as a hammer in the house that you could lend me? Yes, my Uncle Bob is coming to put up some pictures for me, and I'll bring it right back as soon as he's finished with it. In the larder? Oh, thank you. Yes, I'll be back within an hour or so."

"Here's your hammer, Mrs. Johnson, and I am so much obliged to you for the loan of it. I've been wondering whether you thought I took too much liberty this afternoon in mentioning—no? Why, that's very nice of you. You seem quite a busy woman still, though. Why—oh, I suppose you've hidden them away somewhere? Why, those cookies! What, you mean to tell me that they've eaten them all? All of them? That whole pile? Inside of an hour and a half? What's that? It won't spoil their dinner? And what are you doing there? Did I hear you aright, Mrs. Johnson? Did you say that you were making cookies?"

Longest Word in Any Language.
The longest word we know of in any language is a Greek word: "Lepidote-machoselachogaleakraniokatakechum-potrimatosphikarakab melitokatakechu menokichlepkossupho hattoperister abektuonoptoke phallo kikg lopei elolago osiralo baph eraganop teru gon." It is found in Aristophanes' "Ekklesiazousai" and is the name of a dish compounded of dairies of all sorts—fish, flesh, fowl and sauces. It appears in slightly different forms in various editions. "Constantinopolish-fudelsackpheiferverbunt" is a German word. "Kamakauakawenauolokiani" is the name of a little Hawaiian girl. Of course, when we consider catch questions "smiles" is a long word because there is a "mile" between the first and the last letters. In "beleaguered" there is a "league" between "be" and "red."

Sharks' Fins in Demand
The demand for shark fins is always greater than the supply, and they fetch a high price. The principal American market is San Francisco. Considerable quantities are consumed by the Chinese of the Pacific coast, but most of them are exported to China, where shark-fin soup is regarded as one of the greatest of all delicacies. The fins should be at least six inches long; those of eight inches are preferred. The flesh should be trimmed off them, after which they should be dried thoroughly in the sun, without salt.—Family Herald.

Collar Button Foiled
"Although the elusive collar button has been made the subject of jokes for years, its reputation is well-earned," declared a Burlingame avenue resident. "But I have discovered an efficient method for combating its wayward tendencies. I had my wife fix some drapes to fit on the bed and the dresser, closing up the space between these pieces of furniture and the floor. And now, when I drop a button, while it rolls straight for its usual hiding-place, it is stopped in its mad flight by the drapes. All I have to do then is to reach down, pick it up and chuckle."—Detroit News.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

SAILING BY STEERAGE

Cattle, the great mainstay of commerce, will be given a prominent place on the national stage of sportsmanship, when the play of the range will meet human opponents in the Chicago Roundup and world championship rodeo, which will be staged in the Chicago stadium beginning August 15. Chicago business interests, through the Association of Commerce, have made possible the enactment of this drama of the West. "Outlaw" bronchos are difficult to ride, but some of the best riding buckaroos, leaping from corral post to a steer's broad back, have found him the more difficult of the two to master.

When the "covered wagons" creaked westward, bringing the pioneers who built in the Middle West the backbone of a great nation, tied to bind each was the one unfailing source of sustenance—the cow. In front, faithfully hauling the temporary home of the adventurer, were the offspring of the creature at the tailgate. Since then the world's greatest mercantile and industrial empire has been built around the commercial strength of the livestock that has come down from these hardy forebears. And in the Chicago stadium they'll find their place in the sun.

Makes Cake as She Broadcasts

Making cake as she broadcasts her daily recipe to the housewives of America is no trick at all for Mrs. Ellen Rose Dickey, Home Adviser of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. In her function as Home Adviser Mrs. Dickey renders personal service to thousands of inquiries received over WLS, Chicago, the Foundation's station, and by mail. Every day at 9 a. m. she goes on the air with her "Home Question Box" and her daily recipes. There is no problem of the home which Mrs. Dickey will not answer. Home management, home economics, children, correct dress, beauty hints and home decoration are among the subjects she includes on her programs. As shown in the picture Mrs. Dickey actually makes what she is telling her home audience how to do.

DYNAMITE ON THE HOOF

Riding a wild steer is anything but a "pink tea" sport and if you don't believe it, ask any of the many cowboys who will try to stay on these chunks of living dynamite during the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo, beginning August 15. The Brahma steer, a cross between the Mexican longhorn and the Brahma, or sacred cattle of India, is a fighter from the word "go," according to the boys who have tackled them, and after throwing a rider they'll frequently try to maul him up.

Steer riding, calling for an excess of skill and daring, is one of the features of the Chicago Roundup, which will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce for nine days. The competitions are under the direction of Tex Austin, who has managed the largest and most successful of rodeos. More than $30,000 in cash prizes will go to the winners of the events, together with the world's championship titles.

Lesson for July 12

THE COSPEL IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:13-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Behold, I have given him for a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander to the people."—Isa. 55:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Strangers About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Barnabas and Paul in Antioch, Pisidia.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Early Victories of Foreign Missions.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul's Preaching and Its Effects.

I. In the Synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia (vv. 13-16).
From Paphos Paul and Barnabas, with their companion Mark, went northward to Perga. Here Mark, for some reason, perhaps because of hardships, went back. He was ready to go again when they started on their second journey, but Paul would not give his consent (Acts 15:38-39). Before Paul's death he testified in Mark's favor for he had found him profitable unto him for the ministry (II Tim. 4:11). From Perga they went to Antioch in Pisidia, and here they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath day. From this we see that though Paul was sent to the Gentiles, he did not depart from the order of beginning with the Jews.

II. Paul's First Recorded Sermon (vv. 17-41).
This sermon is worthy of careful study. In its analysis we find four parts:
1. Historical (vv. 17-23).
In this section we see how Paul, in a conciliatory way, led them gradually through a series of changes in which God had dealt graciously with them, finally giving them Jesus, His Son.
(1) God chose and exalted the people (v. 17).
(2) He delivered them from Egyptian bondage, and led them through the terrible wilderness (vv. 17-18).
(3) He destroyed the Canaanitish nations, giving their lands to the Israelites (v. 19).
(4) He gave them judges as their deliverers when distressed by surrounding nations (v. 20).
(5) After they had selfishly chosen a king, He rejected the dynasty of Saul, and chose David, a man after His own heart (vv. 21-22).
(6) Finally it was God who from David's seed raised up unto Israel a Savior, Jesus. This demanded proof, which is given in the next section.
2. Apologetical (vv. 24-37).
That this Jesus is the seed of David and therefore the promised Messiah, he proves by three lines of argument:
(1) The testimony of John the Baptist (vv. 24-25).
John disclaimed all power as their deliverer, and pointed to Jesus as such.
(2) The prophecies of Scripture were fulfilled in their rejection and crucifixion of Jesus (vv. 26-29).
(3) By His resurrection from the dead (vv. 30-37).
Having proved Jesus to be the seed of David, he proceeds to follow the doctrinal teachings growing out of such proof.
3. Doctrinal (vv. 38-39).
The great doctrine derived from this proof is justification by faith, the very marrow of the gospel.
(1) The ground of justification is by Jesus. He took our place as a sinner that we might have His place as sons (II Cor. 5:21).
(2) Who are justified? Those who believe in Him.
(3) From what is one justified? All sins. The one who believes in Jesus is freely forgiven. His sins are all blotted out. This is the missionary message for all times. May we strive to get our pupils to believe on Him.
(4) Practical (vv. 40-41).
The application of this sermon was a warning lest the judgment spoken of by Habakkuk should fall upon them.
III. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 42-52).
1. Many of the Jews and proselytes asked to hear these words again (vv. 42-49).
Almost the whole city came to hear the Word of God the next Sabbath. This great crowd incited the jealousy of the Jews.
2. Open Opposition (vv. 50-52).
This jealousy could not long be restrained. It broke out in open opposition. The persecution became so violent that Paul and Barnabas were expelled from the city. This persecution was answered by Paul's rejection of the Jews and his turning to the Gentiles.
3. The disciples were filled with joy and the Holy Ghost (v. 52).

Jean Paul Richter Said:
"The life of Christ concerns Him, who being the holiest among the mighty, and the mightiest among the holy, lifted with His pierced hands empires off their hinges, and turned the stream of centuries out of its channel, and still governs the ages."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

CHERRY PIE PEACHES AND CREAM OO LA LA

In the Winter Time, if You Can Fruit Now—Take Care of the Surplus.

Peaches and cream for breakfast, tomato salad for lunch, cherry pie for dinner—the list goes on indefinitely now, with all kinds of fresh fruits and vegetables to be had. But winter will come and with it a demand for those same foods.

To help those Ohio housewives who believe in looking ahead, the agricultural extension service of the Ohio State university has issued a new edition of a bulletin on "Home Canning of Fruits, Vegetables, and Meats." It gives general directions for canning by the cold-pack method, the kind of canner to use and the tests for jars and rubbers to make sure of an air tight seal.

Such things as the need for blanching, scalding and cold-dipping some fruits and vegetables and the amount of sugar to use with mild flavored and acid fruits are explained.

Special directions for canning vegetables such as sweet corn, asparagus, beans, peas, pumpkins and squash are easy to follow.

Among the greens, not only the old stand-bys like spinach and swiss chard but such delicacies as young beet tops and dandelions can be preserved for winter use. Meats, partially cooked or uncooked, poultry and fish, can also be canned by the cold-pack method.

Why not make sure of a supply of fresh meat all the year, instead of an over-abundance during the winter and a limited supply during the rest of the year? The bulletin is free to any Ohioan. Ask your county agent for one, or write to the Department of Publications at the State university.

TREASURE UNDER SEA FOR 100 YEARS BEING SOUGHT

London Syndicate Is Hunting for Gold and Jewels Sunk Off the Coast of Greece.

London.—Searching for sunken treasure in Navarino bay, off the Greek coast, where the fleet of Turco-Egyptian and Tunisian vessels went down nearly a hundred years ago, was begun recently by a London syndicate of insurance brokers. Specially designed salvage ships were sent to the scene with the hope of being able to carry out their purpose. Members of the expedition have come to London for additional supplies and diving apparatus and, according to their reports, 63 ships were lost on which there were gold, precious stones and statuary which the Turks had removed from Greek towns.

The treasure had been taken on board the fleet for transport to Turkey when Admiral Codrington in 1827 engaged the vessels in battle and sank most of them. The bay where the work has been started is about four miles square, with a rocky bottom and a maximum depth of water of approximately 150 feet. It has been estimated, however, by divers, that the sunken ships have been covered with several feet of mud washed down with the waters from nearby mountains.

Pennsylvania Man Is 107 and Going Strong

This is Jacob Cable of Butler, Pa., who was born at Whitestown, Butler county, in 1817 and so completed his one hundred and seventh year on his last birthday. He has been out of his native county only once, when he went to Pittsburgh to enlist for service in the Civil war, but was rejected because of his height. For more than 50 years Mr. Cable played the fiddle at country dances, and only a few weeks ago rendered a number of old-time selections at a party given in his honor. His father, John Cable, died at one hundred and four years.

Former Chinese Emperor Hopes to Live in America

New York.—Japan twice recently intervened and saved the former Chinese emperor, Hsuang Tung, from his friends of the north who desired to place him again on his throne and his enemies of the south, who wanted his extinction, and now, safe in the Japanese concession at Tientsin, he is seeking to become the ward of the United States, according to messages that have been received in this city within the last few days.

It is also said that "Henry Puyi," as the Manchu prince prefers to be called, will come here anyway to finish his education, but he will come under the protection of Japan.

Two romantic flights marked his progress to Tientsin from the Chinese quarter of Peking, where he had been placed for safekeeping by the "Christian general," Feng-Yu-hsiang, at the time of the latter's coup d'etat last November. The first, which took place on February 10, was to the Japanese legation, the second, two weeks later, was to Tientsin. Persons who have had access to him since the beginning of the year say he has been fearful of his life ever since December 31, when emissaries of the new government forced him to sign a second abdication, which went much further than the first by depriving him of all his imperial appendages and perquisites.

Sunflower Wins as Silage Crop in Canada

Edmonton, Alta.—Despised as a worthless weed a few years ago, sunflowers have developed into an important silage crop in western Canada, according to a bulletin of the department of agriculture.

Alberta produced a sunflower crop of nearly 200,000 tons last year, the largest output yet recorded. Two dollars a ton was the estimated cost of all production. Considering the high food value of the crop, the bulletin declared it to be the cheapest silage or fodder crop ever raised.

Development of the crop is due to the expansion of the dairy industry, said the bulletin. The gospel of the sunflower was first preached by experts. Many farmers sowed small fields to the plant. The experiment was successful.
